

Peace of mind from the source

Dante is a complete interoperable IP solution used in over 4,000 products from more than 600 manufacturers. Quickly becoming the world standard for AV-over-IP solution, Dante has proven to be reliable, flexible and easy to use in systems large and small.

Sometimes you need a trusted partner

We created Dante Professional Services to allow consultants, integrators and end users an easy path to access our deep networked AV expertise and ensure successful Dante deployments.

You can now turn to us for system design, design review, deployment support, commissioning, and even help resolving complex technical issues. From participating as a neutral third-party all the way to providing complete end-to-end design assistance, we're ready to help.

Audinate has strong relationships with Dante OEMs, Design Consultants, Integrators, Software Vendors and Network Equipment Manufacturers. We know how to troubleshoot and who to turn to, saving you both time and money getting your system up and running.

As the people who created Dante, we have more than 15 years of experience developing and deploying Dante systems worldwide. We're network engineers at heart. We know AV-over-IP from the inside out.

That's why for years people like you have called on us to help navigate your most complex network AV design and implementation questions to ensure your customers' success.

Dante is designed to make networking AV fast, easy and reliable. Dante Professional Services is here to help you ensure optimal success with your Dante devices, network configuration and beyond.

Ensuring success

Dante Professional Services engineers have helped many teams effectively design and deploy AV-over-IP networks of any size. Our engineers can participate at any point in your project timeline, yet the best time to bring us in is typically at the beginning of a project. By doing so we can help ensure that all hardware and software is fit to purpose to meet your project goals.
